(On is often translated into English by the passive form of the verb (V. Ex. 1). This is sometimes elegant. On after words such as et, ou, où, que, qui, quoi, si, etc., that would form with it a hiatus or such as would produce any other dissonance, frequently becomes for euphony l'on (V. Ex. 1), except the on is immediately followed by le, la, les, lui or other words beginning with l (V. Ex. 1). In interrogations when on would follow a verb ending in a or e + t preceded and followed by a hyphen (-t-) is placed between them for the sake of euphony.]
